

Institute holds annual dinner

Members of the Wireless Institute of Australia, Tasmanian Division, held their annual dinner at the Elimatta Hotel-Motel last Saturday night.

The dinner followed the annual general meeting which had been held at Latrobe during the day.

The president (Mr Reg Emmett) and his wife, of Launceston, dined with Mr and Mrs Harry Young, of Devonport.

Mrs Emmett's dusty pink gown was in halter-neck style, and Mrs Young chose an old world white blouse to wear with her chocolate brown hostess skirt.

Mr and Mrs Ian Ellings, of Devonport, were joined by Mr and Mrs Greg Noble, of Hobart and Wynyard guests, Mr and Mrs Brian Lord and Mr and Mrs K. Cunningham.

Blue and mauve flowers were scattered on Mrs Ellings' pale blue gown, which had a scooped neckline and long frilled sleeves, and Mrs Lord's green toned floral frock was offset with gold chains.

A self-bow finished the neckline of Mrs Cunningham's mauve and rust toned frock, and a gold necklace was worn at the rounded neckline.

Noticed sharing a table were Mr and Mrs Norm Richardson and daughter Judy, Mr and Mrs Gordon Wood and Peter Dowd, all of Launceston, and Mr Graeme Rand of East Devonport.

Mrs Enid Eyre's flowing pleated navy caftan was patterned with red flowers, and white beads were used for accent.

A flounced neckline and sleeves were a feature of Mrs Harold Hancock's salmon pink chiffon blouse, which she teamed with a foral splashed hostess skirt.
